Lauren Evette Williams, MPA is a seasoned communications and PR specialist with her own style and flair. She is an influencer and writer with experience in national, state, and local government relations, non-profits, health care organizations, and entertainment. With almost 10 years experience, she has built a strong career in public relations, issues management, and policy implementation.

Ms. Williams has provided advice and counsel to elected officials, non-profit leaders, high-level executives, and entertainment personalities. She currently works for a national non-profit policy organization in Washington, D.C.

Before moving to our nation's capital, Ms. Williams worked in the Atlanta PR and government affairs market for eight years. As Chief of Staff and Communications for an Atlanta City Councilmember, she produced a large-scale television and media production event with Screen Gems studios and introduced a city-wide prescription discount card program with the National League of Cities (NLC). She trained over 100 Georgians as citizen lobbyists as Legislative Coordinator for the Feminist Women's Health Center and helped thwart several tactics to reduce women's reproductive rights as a lobbyist during the 2010 Legislative Session. While in the Peach State, Ms. Williams also provided health communications support for various divisions at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention including the Division of Reproductive Health and the Office of Public Health Genomics.

Ms. Williams received her bachelor's of arts degree in Communications and Rhetoric from the University of Pittsburgh and her master's degree in Public Administration from Clark Atlanta University (CAU). While at CAU, Ms. Williams proudly accepted entrance into the Diversity Fellowship Program housed at the Congressional Research Service in Washington, D.C.

She is very active in her community and has a passion for women's rights, pop culture, and politics. She was the 21st National President of the National Black Graduate Students Association and is a proud member of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. In 2011, Ms. Williams was presented the "Young Political Agitator" award alongside the late activist and humanitarian, Mrs. Evelyn Lowery by Georgia STANDUP.
